the idea of the United States, as it is presently held, is about identifying intrinsic rights to the better man (inalienable, immutable, fundamental rights of humanity), & giving them sovereignty, as their share of the self-governed a Republic, w/ elected leadership given the onus to be deft, recognizing that this leadership can become oppressive, & therefore given the levers to swiftly eject when necessary; for the benefit of the common man as citizen our laws should allow us leeway to be human in our most general cause; a fundamental right to self-determine, w/ the mutual recognition of boundaries; recognized within law for dispute we understand the need for leisure, art, family, living space, environment & fauna preservation as an effort; & sustainable quality of lives; given our mutual commonplace we believe in speech & self-defense we believe in commerce; market; trade; mutual benefit; pride; honesty
